ANOTHER "GO SLOW" AT GLASGOW

The latest attempt to do something serious about climate change at the United Nations Climate Change Conference (COP26) in Glasgow was a mixed success. Some progress was made, including nearly 200 countries adopting the Glasgow Climate Pact, but given the increasingly dire nature of the problem, it wasn't nearly enough.

On the positive side, the Pact explicitly recognized for the first time the role of fossil fuels in global warming and called for phasing out coal and ending subsidies for other fossil fuels—all crucially necessary to achieve "net-zero" carbon emissions and keep the planet from warming more than 1.5 degrees Celsius by mid-century. Once again, however, it was more lip service than binding commitment—likely because there were over 500 oil and gas lobbyists at the summit doing their best to water down the Pact. Opposed to them, thousands of young activists hit the streets in Glasgow to demonstrate for uncompromised action.

"The only reason we got what we did is because young people, indigenous leaders, activists and countries on the climate frontline forced concessions that were grudgingly given. Without them, these climate talks would have flopped completely," said Greenpeace International executive director Jennifer Morgan.

The rich countries at the table balked at their pledge, made over a decade ago, to send $100 billion annually to help poor countries already suffering acutely from global warming. Some critics see the Pact as a betrayal: These poorer countries cannot wait 30 years for action to take effect. They need help now!

It's clear that human civilization is like an alcoholic or drug addict, struggling to kick a habit that is certain to devastate us in the near future. But we are inching forward, and we have to keep struggling. Next year in Egypt (COP27) is another opportunity to keep pushing this slow juggernaut forward.

AGE OF RAGE

AMERICANS ON THE RIGHT ARE FURIOUS, BUT DON'T BLAME CONSPIRACY THEORIES, SOCIAL MEDIA OR EVEN DONALD TRUMP.

"With every passing day, it looks less like we have one nation divided by differing political beliefs and more like we have two warring countries battling each other within shared borders," author David Rothkopf tweeted recently. He's right.

A September 2021 CNN poll found that 56% of Americans believe democracy "is under attack." That's no surprise. What is surprising is the survey's finding that it's Republicans who are far more likely than Democrats to feel that way—75% to just 46% of Democrats.

We know that Republicans are angry, scared and more prone to political violence than Democrats and quite comfortable perceiving themselves as victims of the Left, media, minorities...take your pick. Republicans' world of grievances is filled with imagined oppressors robbing simple, God-fearing Christians of their rightful perch atop life's privilege pyramid.

But how did it come to this? Longtime data research blogger Kevin Drum explored the question in a Mother Jones magazine essay. He posited that pinpointing when the anger spurred by partisan politics began might offer clues as to why.

The Donald Trump years saw an explosion of rage, but Americans' fury had been intensifying long before his Presidency. "On a whole range of topics the year 2000—give or take a few years—kept coming up, over and over," Drum told me. A key hint came from "trust in government."

As Drum explained, historical surveys indicate that it was "pretty flat from about 1980 or so to 2000. And then, around 2000, it started going down, down, down to only 20% who now say they have any trust in government." Moreover, via Pew Research Center, he discovered that "from 1994 to 2000 only 16% of Democrats held a 'very unfavorable' view of Republicans," while "between 2000 and 2014 it rose to 38%, and by 2021 it was about 52%."

Drum found that the same is true in reverse for Republicans: "The share who intensely dislike Democrats went from 17 to 43 to about 52%" beginning after the turn of the century. More evidence from Gallup in the 1950s revealed that when people were asked about their daughter marrying a Democrat or a Republican, "only 28% cared one way or the other." Fast-forward to a few years ago and 55% opposed their kids marrying outside of their own party.

What happened since 2000 to trigger such a sea change in the U.S. body politic? Is it the rise and spread of conspiracy theories? Did social media send us over the edge? There was no shortage of explanations for the source of America's rage.

Conspiracies have always been pervasive on the Right. The MAGA crowd's QAnon fantasies of Democratic pedophiles drinking the blood of babies while the world's elite pulled strings to undermine white, Christian Americans are nothing new. Drum saw similar theories justifying armed revolt in essays written back in the '60s. One, in 1964, famously warned that politics on the far right had become "a conflict between absolute good and absolute evil," declaring "nothing but complete victory will do." Another, in 1962, noted that "the politics of the radical Right is the politics of frustration [and] the liberal has become the psychological target of that frustration."

If data suggests the rise of Americans' outrage began in 2000, conspiratorial calls for revolt are an unlikely cause. Drum's "gut feel" before diving into the subject was that "the answer was probably going to end up being social media." But if our mounting fury began in earnest when the new century did—long before Facebook and Twitter commoditized and exacerbated our wrath—the answer must lie elsewhere.

Only one explanation seemed to fit: Fox News. "Around 2000," Drum told me, "it started signing up more and more cable systems, the audience started to grow, and it's grown steadily ever since. There's plenty of research showing that the mere presence of Fox News on a cable system will increase the vote for Republicans upwards of 2 to 3%, a huge amount in a 50-50 country like this."

Fox News' genius (and insidiousness) is that it looks like regular news. "Just like CNN," Drum observed, "it's a bunch of folks in suits and ties, with footage just like anybody else." But it's not regular news. It's propaganda crafted to fuel anger.

"Anybody who watches Fox—and you don't even need research on this—knows exactly how they do it," Drum continued. "Not by being the most right-wing medium around, but by focusing on fear over and over. Everything they do is designed to make people afraid. And that's why so many Republicans think democracy is in danger—because Fox News tells them that, over and over and over again. And they believe it.…To them, Fox News is news. Just like CNN or The New York Times or anything else."

At the end of his 6,000-word Mother Jones essay, Drum conceded that his findings may not excite those who've spent decades warning that the GOP was headed off the rails. "It's more interesting to go after something new, like social media or lunatic conspiracy theories. But the evidence is pretty clear: Those things act as fuel on the fire—and deserve our opposition—but it's Fox News that's set the country ablaze."

But if Fox News is the problem, what's the solution? We may need another 6,000 words—and another 20 years—to answer that question.

STEVE BANNON

The batshit crazy godfather of the alt-right movement, Steve Bannon, is treading in a deep cesspool now that his role in fomenting the January 6th insurrection is finally coming to light. A member of Trump's inner circle and a bellicose pusher of the Big Lie regarding the outcome of the 2020 election, Bannon was held in contempt of Congress in November for defying a subpoena issued by the Select Committee investigating the Capitol riot. His desire to disrupt democratic institutions comes as no surprise, since Bannon has boasted that he's not just a run-of-the-mill conservative, but a "Leninist" revolutionary. "Lenin wanted to destroy the state, and that's my goal too," he told journalist Ronald Radosh in 2013. "I want to bring everything crashing down and destroy today's establishment." By establishment, he meant both the Democratic and Republican parties. Later he told the same journalist, "National Review and The Weekly Standard are both left-wing magazines, and I want to destroy them also."

Your brain would have to be riddled by mad cow disease to call two of the most right-wing rags in the country "left-wing" and to believe that the modern Republican Party is not conservative enough. But that's Bannon, whose mind is as disheveled as his appearance. "Sloppy Steve" Trump once called him. But Steve got a little too sloppy and overconfident before January 6.

After Biden won the election in November, Trump went down to his Mar-a-Lago compound in Florida to play golf and blast bullshit about a "stolen election." But according to Bob Woodward and Robert Costa's Peril, on December 30, Bannon called and begged him to return to D.C. and focus all his energy and tweets on January 6, the day that Congress would certify the election results. "We're going to kill the Biden Presidency…in the crib," he reportedly vowed. The next day Trump flew back to Washington. A volcano was simmering in D.C., primed to explode, with Trumpites on 8kun and other online forums openly posting calls for violent revolution: "Go to Washington on Jan 6 and help storm the Capital [sic]. We will storm government buildings, kill cops, kill security guards, kill federal employees and agents." Trump poured gas on the fire, tweeting: "JANUARY SIXTH, SEE YOU IN DC!" and "Be there, will be wild!"

The day before the volcano erupted, on his January 5th War Room podcast, Bannon said, "All hell is going to break loose tomorrow…. So many people said, 'Man, if I was in a revolution, I would be in Washington.' Well, this is your time in history. It's all converging, and now we're on the point of attack tomorrow…. And all I can say is: Strap in. You have made this happen, and tomorrow it's game day." After these virtual marching orders, Bannon worked with other members of the Trump team at the Willard hotel, mere blocks from the White House, with a clear view of the Capitol building. Joining him to watch the next-day festivities was Rudy Giuliani, the loudest mouthpiece spewing the "stolen election" garbage.

It turned out to be no Leninist Revolution—that one succeeded. It was far closer to Hitler's first flop: the Beer Hall Putsch in 1923, where he and a gang of 2,000 goose-steppers tried to violently take over the state government in Munich, Bavaria. Hitler the ringleader was convicted of treason and sentenced to five years in prison. General Mark Milley, who took action to prevent Trump from giving orders to the military or using nuclear weapons if the coup succeeded, later said it was "a U.S. version...of the paramilitary wing of the Nazi Party that supported Hitler. It was a planned revolution. Steve Bannon's vision coming to life. Bring it all down, blow it up, burn it and emerge with power." [Editor's note: This quote is from Peril and is described as coming from Milley's notes on the January 6th insurrection.]

Well, Steve, if you launch a violent revolution, you had damn well better succeed or face the consequences. It's no wonder Bannon refused to obey a subpoena to testify before the congressional commission investigating the insurrection: He would be forced to either lie and commit perjury or offer evidence that could convict him of sedition. He currently faces fines up to $100,000 and up to a year in prison for contempt of Congress, but he faces far worse if convicted of sedition: fines and up to 20 years in prison. So we see his choices now as 1) face the music—with probable conviction—and go down as a martyr for the cause or 2) flee to sanctuary in another country before the cuffs are on him.

This could be the end of the road for Bannon and his vain, futile fantasy of becoming a new Lenin leading a global right-wing revolution. After he resigned—or was pushed out—as President Trump's chief strategist and senior counselor after only eight months on the job, he resumed his old role as helmsman of Breitbart News, the leading online voice of alt-right white nationalism. "I've got my hands back on my weapons…It's Bannon the Barbarian," he rejoiced. But this gig didn't last long either. After journalist Michael Wolff's book Fire and Fury was published, with several quotes by Bannon dissing the Orange Fuhrer, the Trump/Bannon bromance broke up and Bannon sheepishly stepped down at Breitbart.

Next, Bannon hooked up with an exiled Chinese billionaire, Guo Wengui, and flew around on a private jet to support Republican congressional candidates. His dark money group, Citizens of the American Republic, fertilized primary challenges to Republicans that Bannon deemed insufficiently obedient to Trump, and fueled campaigns to help the GOP in the 2018 midterm elections. He backed Wendy Rogers in Arizona and Mick Rich in New Mexico, both of whom lost. Two years later, while aboard Wengui's yacht, Bannon was arrested and charged with conspiracy to commit wire fraud and money laundering with his We Build the Wall organization. His fellow fraudster, Trump, pardoned him before that case went to trial.

Frustrated with his repeated failures in the U.S., Bannon migrated to Europe and founded an organization called The Movement in Brussels to support far-right and neofascist parties across the continent. Their main goal: more Brexits—break up the European Union and go back to the good old days of European nations constantly at each other's throats. The Movement fizzled out like a wet firecracker, because the various interests in these nations were too diverse for a unified movement, and it didn't help that Bannon was an American. Basically, they told him to fuck off.

Although Bannon and Trump had a falling out, with Trump ridiculing him in tweets ("Cried when he got fired and begged for his job," and "Now Sloppy Steve has been dumped like a dog by almost everyone. Too bad!"), the two hissy-fitters eventually made up and pretended to admire each other again, but who knows how long this might last. Trump himself is in hot water over his role in challenging the election and possibly inciting the insurrection. He is trying to assert executive privilege to keep Congress from probing his Presidential records in the National Archives. But federal judge Tanya Chutkan has ruled against Trump: "Presidents are not kings, and Plaintiff is not President." As a former advisor to Trump, Bannon is trying to smokescreen his own words and actions under the same flimsy argument, though that has already been rejected by the House Select Committee.

So what could happen? As the temperature rises, the two fraudsters might roll over to blame each other for the failed revolution—like the selfish con men they are. We would love to see them spend some time together at Club Fed, along with the hundreds of insurrectionists who have been arrested and charged so far. Enjoy the concrete beds and Nutraloaf, Assholes! A VERY HUSTLER VALENTINE'S DAY

Love it or hate it, Valentine's Day is Christmas for romantics. And while everyone is entitled to their kicks, the tired cliches of this annual schmaltz-fest can get tedious real fast.

If overpriced restaurants, roses and gas station teddy bears are your thing, then great, go nuts. But if you yearn for a love life less ordinary, fasten your seatbelts: This year, HUSTLER is going to help you kick things up umpteen notches.

Idea #1: Couples Domme Session

At Toronto's Ritual Chamber dungeon (TheRitualChamber.ca), Headmistress Shahrazad and her eminently qualified staff are certain to leave a lasting impression (pun very much intended). "Couples regularly access the services we provide for relationship enhancement and the deepening of intimacy. Because each BDSM session is designed bespoke, every couple that visits is encouraged to set the parameters of the experience in terms of what kinks and fetishes they want to explore, what their limits are and the degree to which they'd like us involved (within dungeon limits). Our priority is helping to facilitate an adventure or sexy learning experience that meets the needs of both individuals, one they can remember for years to come. Couples' sessions start at $350 an hour Canadian and are only limited by your imagination and budget." Twitter: @RitualChamberTO

Idea #2: Sex Toys for Us

Paging Miss Whitney Morgan! A prolific content creator and foot fetish specialist, the divine Miss W (Twitter: @MsWhitneyMorgan) is also a Ph.D. in sex toy satisfaction. Here she reviews couple-tastic devices that push everyone's buttons—all available with just a click or two at HUSTLERHollywood.com.

"For a little tease, getting her ready to come home and please, my favorite is the Lovense Lush 3 ($159). Though there are quite a few other fun Bluetooth toys out there, this one is quiet, powerful and can be controlled via an app by your lover anywhere, at any time. Explore your exhibitionist side—see her O-face as she orders dinner, cupping her mouth to keep from moaning in public.

"My first time using a strap-on wasn't that great—clumsy, stiff, no pleasure—a far cry from the experience of what's available today. Strap U offers an amazing variety of toys that let both partners enjoy vibration and penetration. The 10X Ergo-Fit G-Pulse ($135) is highly recommended with its ability to inflate for that perfect fit.

"But if you're looking for something a little more simple to slip on and open the door to more kink, nothing beats a vibrating cock ring. Screaming O makes some of the best, like the Charged Ohare ($54). Imagine turning your cock into a real life vibrator! Easy, fun, simple and orgasmic."

Idea #3: Vegas, Baby!

For the Valentine's Day ballers who like to go big, then there's no sexier place to spread around some paper than at Larry Flynt's Hustler Club Las Vegas. Schedule a VIP pickup and leave your inhibitions in the car as you and your beloved soak up 70,000 square feet of delicious eye candy. If you don't have Drake money, don't worry: The Couples Package—normally $600—is just $250 if you buy online and includes a premium bottle, VIP table, no cover charge and front-of-the-line access, plus free round-trip transportation. Dancers are standing by! VegasHustlerClub.com

KIARRA KAI UPDATE

Remember Kiarra Kai, the free spirit from our July 2021 issue ("Models Without Borders'') who gave up her L.A. apartment, bought a short bus and is living her best life as a sexy, fearless nomad? She's still at it, driving all across this great big country and taking lots of nude hikes along the way (check out her OnlyFans, you dogs).

When we last checked in with her, Kiarra's home on wheels was looking pretty bare-bones and in desperate need of a makeover (pimp my bus?). Well, we are happy to report that the upgrade is finally underway, with plans to include all the mod-cons she can possibly fit in there. Peep the following transmission, beamed directly from her secret lair somewhere in the Florida Panhandle:

"So I ended up driving back across the country to Florida, where I plan to finish the build. It feels validating to get more miles under my belt. One weird thing about L.A. is they are creating new [parking] laws that affect bus life/van life people. Also, it's technically illegal to live full-time in a vehicle.

"All the DIY garages I applied to in L.A. thought having a bus there would be too much trouble, even though it's the size of most Sprinter vans. And with lumber/home improvement prices increasing, it just seemed more and more like Florida was the place to go.

"Since arriving, I have enjoyed being out of the city. Beaches, springs and walks through the swamp with my new puppy have all made the stress of building out a bus a little easier to manage.

"This is the first time Marie—the bus—has been to the East Coast, and she loves it! I have been working on small patches of rust, which is a lot more work than it seems, and I just finished ripping up the rubber lining on the floor. The subflooring is really good, and the next step will be to add insulation. Hopefully vinyl floors too?

"From there it will go a lot faster with the queen-size bed I plan to put in, plus a small kitchen that includes a two-burner stove, oven, a sink and small fridge. I'm definitely most excited for the addition of solar power—I found a great system that seems like it will be perfect for the bus."

Stay tuned for more exciting adventures and, if we're lucky, nudes…

TEARS OF A CLOWN

It doesn't feel like so long ago when we once collectively scoffed at the existence of men's rights. To quote Leslie Knope, the stalwart bureaucrat of NBC's Parks and Recreation, "Men's rights is nothing." Well, what was once a petty distraction has now blown up into a dangerous shitstorm of entitlement and misinformation. Worse, we now have to contend with the likes of Josh Hawley and the sewage hole he calls a mouth.

The Republican senator from Missouri doesn't normally get much attention on gaming news sites like Kotaku, but that changed last November when this modern-day Hitler Youth said that men are retreating into a world of porn and video games because "traditional" masculinity is under attack. Sure, buddy…and if my grandma had wheels, she'd be a bus.

"Responsibility is one of God's greatest gifts to mankind, and men must be held responsible for their actions," Hawley said at the National Conservatism Conference at the tail end of October. "Still, can we be surprised that after years of being told they are the problem, that their manhood is the problem, more and more men are withdrawing into the enclave of idleness, and pornography, and video games?"

No, Josh—it's men like you who are the problem. Men who refuse to show even a shred of accountability for their actions; men who are bereft of compassion, character and the balls to fight for what's right. His solution? More manufacturing jobs and fucking tax credit for getting married. Problem solved!

As to the perennial scapegoats of porn and video games, let's start with the latter: We live in the golden age of gaming, where online communities are a source of support and stimulation at a time when in-person contact is still a little scary. And like any other pastime, be it jogging or needlepoint, moderation is the mot du jour. In other words, don't hate the game.

As for the anti-porn shtick, it's a red herring we've seen before. Tell you what, Josh: Reach out to us for a free month's subscription to HUSTLER-Magazine.com, and see if you learn a thing or two about what it means to be sex-positive. You may just enjoy what's left of your squalid, pathetic existence.

MUNCHING WITH MISSY

When you want to learn how to do something right, you go to the experts. And while gay men don't have an exclusive on eating ass, it certainly pays to listen to someone who does it with passion and gusto.

Last November, Vice contributor Navin Noronha shared his insight into the joys of anilingus and how straight/cis folk can learn a lot about rimming from the queer community (teach us, teachers!).

But while Vice is nice, HUSTLER's in-house experts are beyond peerless. Performer and ace contributor Missy Martinez is an oracle of butt stuff and gives us her top tips for munching sweet, delicious butt.

Communicate: "Before you start chowing down on a chocolate starfish, make sure you use your mouth to talk to your partner about a trip down to the backdoor. Couples may not necessarily be on the same page when it comes to sex acts and kinks. Talking about your feelings, concerns and desires regarding butt munching is key. When you're both onboard, it is going to make the booty buffet more enjoyable (and appetizing!)"

Plan it out: "If it's the first time you and your partner are going to do the dirty deed, comfort and mood are key. It can be physically demanding for the eater, so a softer surface will make the ass diner feel less strained. Couches and beds are great spots for beginners in the art of anilingus. Another thing: Nothing ruins the mood more than an untimely knock at the door or phone call from your grandma. Plan out a time and place where you both can be undisturbed and comfortable. Make this time all about mouths and buttholes."

Be prepared: "There are different levels of ass eating, and if you plan on going colon spelunking, more preparation is required. If it's just a few casual licks, you don't need to worry about an enema (the process of cleaning out your ass with water/saline). However, if you are planning on going for it, you'll definitely need to enema, especially if there is going to be tongue penetration. At the very least, be considerate and use a baby wipe (and make sure there aren't any rogue toilet paper fragments)."

Enjoy. "Now that all the logistics are out of the way, it's time to have fun! Listen to your partner's body (moans, breathing, squirms), and respond accordingly. Take it slow, and make sure you keep in communication with your butt buddy to see what techniques they enjoy (or hate)."

HIGH-HEELED HOOEY

Have foot fetishists infiltrated academia? Far be it for us to cast aspersions, but it's hard not to be skeptical of a university study that claims high-heeled shoes are a woman's ticket to bigger Os and a superhuman pelvic floor.

Obviously, a woman in heels is a thing of beauty, a living work of art. But better orgasms? Please explain.

In studying the impact of different shoe heights on women's pelvic floor muscles, the "experts" at Shanghai's Fudan University made the chance discovery that a two-inch heel "can stimulate the muscle that also helps a woman orgasm." (Via New York Post). As hypotheses go, it's a big swing.

The pelvic floor is located below the pelvis and supports the bladder, bowel and uterus. And while a strong pelvic floor can help prevent urinary incontinence, it can also be a boon for sexing, with increased sensitivity and a more powerful climax.

But claiming high heels are the key to sexual fulfillment is like saying nonstop boning is the best way to train for an Ironman Triathlon: Sure, it can't hurt, but there's a lot of other stuff you should be doing to complement that one thing.

Again, if heels are your jam, then you do you. Otherwise, there are lots of great exercises you can do to help make your pelvic floor strong enough to land a helicopter on it. First, find your pelvic floor muscles by stopping the flow of urine next time you have to pee. Feel that clench? That's it.

Now that you know where it is, sit comfortably and squeeze (i.e., flex) it 10 to 15 times. Remember to breathe, and refrain from tightening your stomach. Once you get used to doing this, you can start to gradually increase the time you hold each one. Each week, add more squeezes—not too many though; you don't want to overdo it—and after a month you should start to notice results.

Science fact: Men also have a pelvic floor. And if erectile dysfunction is an issue, then a simple routine like the one described above can do a lot to help (heels optional). Do the math, and you tell us what's cheaper: those little blue pills or squeezing your pee muscle every day. It's not rocket science.

DARE TO CARE

The kink community has a lot to teach us about sex and sexuality. The primacy of consent is a big one, as is the importance of communication and respect for your partner. Another mainstay of BDSM: aftercare. Be you vanilla or defiantly not vanilla, some best practices should be practiced by everyone.

BDSM can be expressed and experienced in countless ways, often involving various forms of power exchange. Impact play (spanking, flogging, caning, etc.) and role-play, including sub-space, can add to the intensity. A person needs help and support returning to baseline, and aftercare is the soft cushion that facilitates reentry. It can be as simple as cuddling or wrapping someone in a blanket as they reconnect to the now.

Of course, sex is different for everyone. What seems tame to one person may be a lot to handle for another. Sexual intimacy can be overwhelming, and aftercare is an expression of intimacy through kindness.

Seattle dominatrix Ruby Enraylls (RubyEnraylls.com) is something of an expert in the art of aftercare, and shares advice that can benefit anyone in or out of the dungeon.

"Have you ever finished a really hard workout, completed a complex task or gotten through a complicated situation that made you anxious, then felt like absolute crap afterwards for seemingly no reason? You want to feel a sense of accomplishment, but instead you feel down. This is what we call 'drop' in the BDSM community.

"Of course, Top/sub drop is not exclusive to BDSM. So why do we experience drop? When you do something that is challenging, your body compensates to help you get through it. For example, a really hard spanking: In this scenario, the body releases endorphins that trigger positive feelings.

"Aftercare is critical because it provides a natural end point while also allowing for intimacy and connection after a particularly harsh scene.

"Some aftercare suggestions: Talk. Share how you feel and what made it special. Positive, nonsexual contact. Intimate, but nonsexual. Positive affirmations—'You make me feel sexy.' Ask your partner about their turn-ons, preferences, favorite positions—learn about their pleasure, and file it away for next time."

THAT GIRL

THISYEARSMODEL.COM

Well, I don't know if I should say this, but when I was a kid, my dad had all of his adult magazines in the bathroom, and I was a snoopy kid. Every couple of weeks I would look to see if he had any new ones. I'd always flip through them and dream about how I would like to be that girl one day.

"I love doing all the outdoorsy stuff—sports, dirt biking, swimming and hiking—but over the years I have definitely become more girly, so now I'm a mix of pretty girl/tomboy. Filming has become a passion of mine, so I fit in shoots wherever I can and spend a lot of time editing my vlogs. I really enjoy it.

"It doesn't take much to get me in the mood for sex. I'm generally a super horny person! Sometimes I tease and rub my clit or use my vibrator to warm up. Other times I watch porn or just jump right into it. I absolutely love kissing. Looks aren't huge for me. I look for talent and drive and a partner who accepts what I do for a living and appreciates me for who I am. Typically I orgasm multiple times a day, and believe it or not, I really get off on watching the adult videos I'm in!"

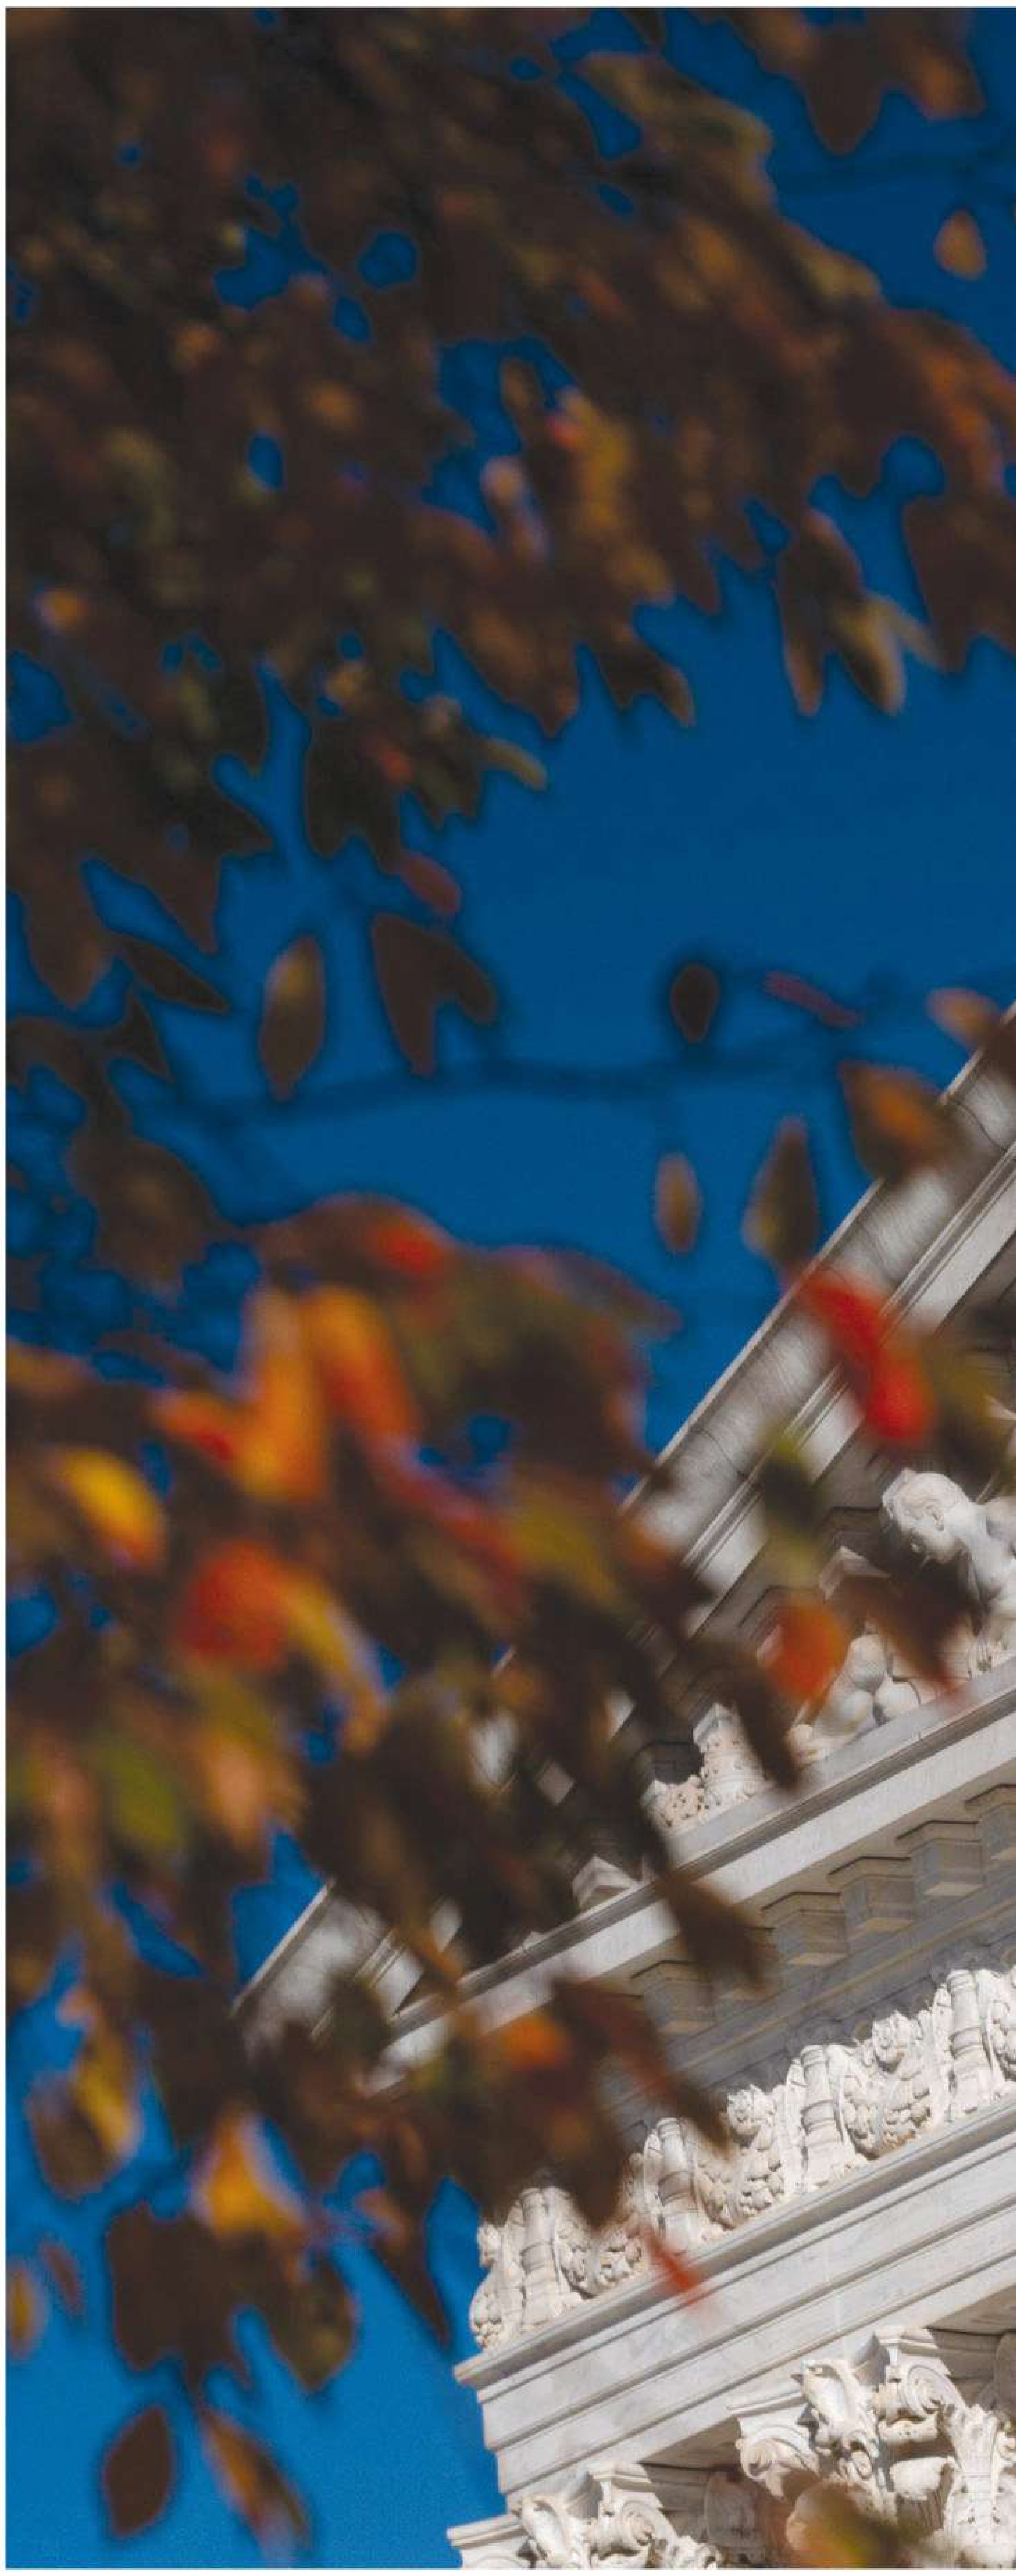
THE SUPREME COURT ON TRIAL

AN INTERVIEW WITH CONSTITUTIONAL LAW EXPERT ERWIN CHEMERINSKY



Professor Erwin Chemerinsky is a sharp critic of the U.S. Supreme Court and the police—more specifically, abuse of power by the police. He boldly tackles both institutions in his 14th book, Presumed Guilty, How the Supreme Court Empowered the Police and Subverted Civil Rights. Chemerinsky charges that the highest court in the land is a virtual coconspirator when it comes to enabling and empowering police brutality against African Americans.

The New York Times hailed him as “a constitutional scholar and much-admired teacher…one of the shining lights of legal academia…[who] work[s] tirelessly for civil liberties.” Chemerinsky’s clients have included Valerie Plame Wilson, the CIA agent outed by George W. Bush’s Administration; alleged al Qaeda terrorist Salem Abdul Salem Ghereby, imprisoned at Guantanamo Bay; and the National Organization for Women. He has also sued President Trump for refusing to divest from his businesses. Remarkably consistent throughout his work is his shining commitment to individual rights as set forth in America’s founding document.

I first encountered Chemerinsky around 1999, when I contributed to “The Finger” column of New Times LA and the professor taught at USC’s Gould School of Law, one of his many key academic positions. Chemerinsky was the “go-to guy” for clear quotes about the law that turned complex legalese into understandable language for layman readers. We recently renewed our acquaintance via an in-depth phone call to the Bay Area, where Chemerinsky has served since 2017 as the Dean, University of California, Berkeley, Law School and the Jesse H. Choper Distinguished Professor of Law at Berkeley Law. Decades after our first interviews, Erwin Chemerinsky didn’t disappoint, still answering questions with his no-hold-barred, crisp and to-the-point critiques of the Supreme Court, law enforcement, and the state of justice—and injustice—in America today. >>

HUSTLER: The title of your new book, Presumed Guilty, How the Supreme Court Empowered the Police and Subverted Civil Rights, challenges the premises that American justice is supposedly predicated on: the presumption of innocence and equal justice under the law. Tell us about your new book.
ERWIN CHEMERINSKY: There are many constitutional provisions that are meant to constrain the police: the Fourth Amendment, that limits police stops, arrests and searches; the Fifth Amendment, that limits how police can question, because of the privilege against self-incrimination. Due process, that's supposed to limit how police handle eyewitness identifications. And yet what I argue is that throughout American history the Supreme Court has not enforced these provisions to constrain the police. Quite the contrary—what the Supreme Court has done is empower the police. To pick an example, it is not hyperbole to say that now police can stop and search virtually anyone at any time without violating the Constitution. Presumed Guilty is trying to suggest ways forward for reforming police, even though there will be a very conservative Supreme Court for a long time to come.

Presumed Guilty comes to the tragic conclusion that the Kerner Commission Report, which President Johnson commissioned after 1967's urban unrest, was largely ignored. In fact, you write that the Report of the National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders could have "just been written and was describing America in the early 21st century."
The Kerner Commission wrote about how we were increasingly two separate nations: "one black, one white—separate and unequal." More to the point, the Kerner Commission wrote powerfully about the racism of policing in the United States. Study after study shows that Black men are nine times more likely to be killed by the police than white men. Study after study shows that Blacks and brown people are much more likely to be stopped by the police and frisked than white individuals.

Every time I teach constitutional law and criminal procedure, the Black and Latino men in my class have been stopped just for driving while Black or driving while brown. So this is why I say that the racism in policing that the Kerner Commission wrote about in '68 plagues us today in 2021.

When you look at the difference in the statistics of police violence, a Black man has nine times a greater chance of being killed by police officers than a white individual. If you look at how much more often Blacks are subjected to excessive force than whites, nothing explains it other than race. All other variables being constant, police violence against people of color is much greater than against white people.

Give us some examples from Presumed Guilty of how the Supreme Court has empowered and emboldened the police to presume nonwhites are guilty before they have even been charged with a crime.

As an example, the Supreme Court has said that if police illegally stop an individual and then find out there's an arrest warrant, the police can search the person, and any evidence gained is admissible. A much higher percentage of people of color have some outstanding arrest warrant than a white person, and the Court just opened the door to encouraging illegal police stops.

Or another example: The Supreme Court has said it doesn't matter that a police stop is a pretext—so long as the police have reasonable suspicion that somebody violated a traffic law, they can stop a person no matter what. If you follow any driver for about 15 minutes, you'll see they go a mile over the speed limit or change lanes without a turn signal or don't stop long enough at a stop sign, and the Supreme Court has said even if race is the grounds for the stop, even if it's just a pretext, police can stop the car, pull it over, order the driver and passenger out and then search that area.

> "WHAT THE SUPREME COURT HAS DONE IS EMPOWER THE POLICE...IT IS NOT HYPERBOLE TO SAY THAT NOW POLICE CAN STOP AND SEARCH VIRTUALLY ANYONE AT ANY TIME WITHOUT VIOLATING THE CONSTITUTION."

What did you think of the move to disband the Minneapolis Police Department following the death of George Floyd?

Police abolition can't and won't happen. There was an initial vote after the death of George Floyd to disband the Minneapolis Police Department; that since has been abandoned. The reality is, every culture and society needs some form of law enforcement. Now, I think we can shift some law enforcement resources to other social service agencies, relying less on police for these services, but abolishing the police isn't the answer. We have to reform policing in the United States.

Tell us your opinion of the movement to defund the police?

It depends on what you mean. If "defund the police" means abolish the police, I'm in strong disagreement. No society can get away without law enforcement. Also, the more we cut the police, the more those with money will hire their own private security forces. That exacerbates inequalities. And private security forces don't even comply with the Constitution. If "defund the police" means identifying some tasks we rely on the police for and asking other social services to take them on, I think that may be a good idea. Mental health services can get certain things done other than by the police.

Presumed Guilty* deals with the fact that law enforcement officers enjoy widespread immunity from prosecution, which has proven to be a huge obstacle to federal legislation reforming the police. Is forcing police unions to pay fines for excessive use of force a viable way to stop or at least limit police brutality?

I don't think there'd be a legal way to force the police union to bear the cost of misconduct by individual officers, because in the tort law we only hold people responsible for their own conduct. I don't know that the police unions—if they don't employ the officers—that they're liable for what its members do. I think police unions are a real obstacle to police reform.

How many times have you argued cases before the Supreme Court? What is that experience like?

I've argued seven cases in the Supreme Court. It's an experience that is intimidating and exciting and frustrating. It's intimidating because of the stakes that are involved. It's exciting because it's before the nine Supreme Court Justices. And it's also frustrating because there's never enough time to answer their questions.

Please define what the shadow docket is.

The shadow docket refers to matters that come to the Justices for an emergency ruling—ruling to issue an emergency injunction or stay of execution or to lift an injunction that was granted by a lower court. There have always been emergency matters coming to the Supreme Court. I think there have been more in recent years, and the court has done more with these emergency cases. But there's nothing nefarious about it, and I think shadow docket has a negative connotation.

Reuters calls the shadow docket an "obscure legal procedure" and a "short-circuit approach."

It's not obscure. The Supreme Court has rules about how to go before it when you need an emergency order. Experienced Supreme Court advocates know exactly what to do with it. So I wouldn't call it obscure. >>

In terms of a shortcut, it is the Court issuing a ruling without full briefing and oral argument. It's supposed to be on true emergency matters.

How did Trump impact this process?
The Trump Administration went to the Supreme Court much more than we've seen previously to try and stop lower court injunctions against its policies. I'll give you an example: Congress refused to fund President Trump's border wall. So President Trump, on his own, diverted Defense Department funds to do this. A federal district court issued a preliminary injunction against this. The Trump Administration went to the Supreme Court, and on the so-called shadow docket they lifted the injunction.

When President Trump on his own changed immigration policy, saying that somebody from another country who goes to Mexico has to seek asylum in Mexico before coming to the United States, a lower federal court stopped it, saying President Trump didn't have the legal authority. And then the Supreme Court lifted the injunction.

So the Trump Administration used the Supreme Court and the shadow docket much more than previous administrations have done.

> "THE NUMBER OF JUSTICES IS NOT SET BY THE CONSTITUTION. IT'S SET BY A FEDERAL STATUTE AND CAN BE CHANGED BY FEDERAL LAW."

Has the shadow docket been used in federal death penalty cases?
The death penalty is a place where the Justices have often gotten involved on an emergency basis. There are many people facing execution who seek a last-minute stay from the Supreme Court. Occasionally they've been successful. What you had in the Trump Administration was lower courts issuing stays of execution and the Trump Administration wanting to execute individuals, getting those stays of execution lifted.

Is the new Texas abortion law an example of a shadow docket ruling?
On September 1, challengers to the Texas abortion law went to the Justices and asked for an emergency preliminary injunction. So it came to the Supreme Court on the shadow docket. But the five conservative Justices—Thomas, Alito, Gorsuch, Kavanaugh and Barrett—refused to issue such an injunction, so the Texas law went into effect.

Your 2011 book The Conservative Assault Against the Constitution contends that "the Supreme Court and the federal appellate courts have undergone a dramatic shift to the right, the result of a determined effort by right-wing lawmakers and presidents to reinterpret the Constitution by reshaping the judiciary." Your book was written a whole decade ago, but that was very prescient, Professor.
What I wrote a decade ago seems out of date today, because the effect of President Trump's picks for the Supreme Court and lower and middle courts have pushed the federal judiciary so much further to the right. President Trump said that he was going to appoint Supreme Court Justices who were committed to overruling Roe v. Wade. He picked three of the most conservative federal court appeal justices in the country for the Supreme Court in Neil Gorsuch, Brett Kavanaugh and Amy Coney Barrett. The Supreme Court is the most conservative now that it's been since the early 1930s. The thing that I foresaw in The Conservative Assault Against the Constitution is sadly coming to fruition.

Do you favor any of the remedies proposed in the public discourse, such as expanding the number of Supreme Court Justices?
I personally would favor expanding the size of the Supreme Court—but it's not going to happen. The number of Justices is not set by the Constitution. It's set by a federal statute and can be changed by federal law. Nine is a historic accident. What we've seen in recent years is a real ideological imbalance on the Supreme Court.

Between 1960 and 2020, there were 32 years with Republican Presidents and 28 years with Democratic Presidents. It's almost even. The Republican Presidents picked 15 Supreme Court Justices; the Democratic Presidents picked only eight. I think part of that is the court packing by Republicans we saw in blocking the consideration of Merrick Garland and then rushing through the confirmation of Amy Coney Barrett. But expanding the size of the Supreme Court would take passing a federal statute. There's no way it's going to get past a Senate filibuster, so there's no way it could be adopted.

You're no newcomer to criticizing the High Court. What are some of the main points of your 2015 book The Case Against the Supreme Court?
The basis of that book is that the Supreme Court has often failed, often at the most important times in American history. Take as an example race. The Supreme Court has a dismal record with regard to race. In Dred Scott v. Sandford, striking down the Missouri Compromise [in 1857 the Supreme Court ruled Congress did not have the authority to prohibit slavery in U.S. territories], precipitating the Civil War; in Plessy v. Ferguson, upholding separate but equal [in an 1896 decision upholding the constitutionality of segregation]. Take a more recent example, in 2013 Shelby County v. Holder and in 2021 Brnovich v. Democratic National Committee, gutting the Voting Rights Act.

Given the Senate Judiciary Committee's recent "Subverting Justice" report, what crimes do you objectively think that Donald Trump should be charged with in terms of the January 6th Capitol riot and the alleged attempted coup to overturn the results of the 2020 Presidential election?
It was an attempted coup. It was an attempt to overthrow the democratic process. I think the question is, at the very least, might he be charged with incitement for what occurred on the morning of January 6?

How about sedition or treason?
Treason is enormously difficult to prove or to gain a conviction for. I think the question is, How do we hold Trump accountable and send a message that what was done was wrong without further enflaming deep divisions? I think charging him with incitement or sedition would certainly enflame some of those passions. Charging him with treason would be lighting a match—and I worry about the explosion.

What should happen to the top Trump cronies who refuse to comply with congressional and court subpoenas?
They should be held in contempt. We have precedent, from instances where Congress has subpoenaed people and they refuse to come testify. They were held in contempt of Congress. We should do the same thing here.

Some of what's going on here is the worry on the part of the Biden Administration that charging Trump and his supporters will just further polarize and enflame divisions. I felt, when Barack Obama took office, his Justice Department should have been prosecuting those who were responsible for torture to fight the War on Terror. President Obama took the position it'd be too divisive to do that. I think it was a mistake. When I heard then Dick Cheney do interviews defending what he'd done—if only there had been prosecution and conviction, he couldn't so blithely defend what had happened. I think there's a cost in not bringing prosecutions.

Where do you stand on whether or not Justice Stephen Breyer should retire now, at 83, while a Democrat is in the White House and can appoint his replacement?
I wrote an op-ed in The Washington Post this spring saying that Justice Breyer should retire at the end of the term, which would have been July of 2021. In March of 2014 I wrote an op-ed in the L.A. Times urging Justice Ginsburg to retire at the end of that term. I said it looked like the Republicans were going to take the Senate in November 2014—they did—and there's no way to know what's going to happen in the 2016 Presidential election. That turned out to be an understatement. I said, if [RBG] wants somebody with her values and views to take her place, now is the time to retire. She didn't. She gambled. We lost.

So I urged Justice Breyer to learn from this experience and to step down. He didn't. My hope is that at the end of the coming term, in June/July 2022, he'll retire, when there's enough time for President Biden to pick while we know there's a Democratic Senate. If he doesn't and if the Democrats lose the Senate, we know that the new Senate majority leader, Mitch McConnell, isn't going to confirm anyone Biden picks for the Supreme Court.

If Justice Breyer does step down from the bench in 2022, I have a great nominee to replace him on the Supreme Court: His name is Erwin Chemerinsky.
You're very kind, but I'm 68 years old, and I'm sure that President Biden wants to pick someone much younger, who's going to be there for a longer amount of time. Amy Coney Barrett was 48 years old when she was confirmed in 2020. If she stays on the court till she's 87—the age when Justice Ginsburg died—Barrett will be a Justice until the year 2059. So Biden needs to pick somebody in that age range—not mine. But thank you. H

I try to keep my private life separate from my porn persona. Is that weird? I don't know. Even though I enjoy having sex on camera, I get nervous talking about myself. But I'll reveal a few things. Let's see. I'm Hungarian, I like to travel, and my real name isn't Samantha. Everything else…well, it's a mystery. Exciting that way, yes?

"I'm pretty shy; still, I feel confident when I'm naked and cuddled up with a good lover. I tend to date older men. They have wisdom, and I appreciate their maturity. Sex is a huge part of my life, and I feel like I'm pretty adventurous in the bedroom. I like to try new things. And I love to be watched. That's probably why I tried porn in the first place. The thought of you getting turned on watching me makes me so very wet."

I have a bubbly personality, and I like making people laugh. I'm creative. Being in this industry can push you into wanting to people-please, but I try to avoid that and instead speak my mind and do what I want to do. Before I got into porn, I went to college, thinking I was going to get a degree and then a fancy corporate job. But it was stressful not getting to be myself. I ended up quitting my jobs—yes, multiple jobs—and started an OnlyFans. The rest is history!

"Some of my favorite work involves BDSM. Like I once shot a bondage fantasy where I was bound, ball-gagged and blindfolded as my partner dripped candle wax on my body. It was intense but exhilarating! If money wasn't an issue, I'd host a masquerade party in a castle, with beautiful ball gowns and multiple scenes. There would just be a ton of sex and candles…and loads of passion, of course."

I want to be the type of girl you can't get out of your head. I live to fuck and suck, and I'm a self-proclaimed BJ queen. I find the taste of cum delicious, so go ahead, pop in my mouth. But you know what? I like girls too. I don't really have a type. As long as we vibe, then I'm into you. We can smoke pot, play video games or make some art. Then maybe you can toy with my pussy for a while and build up to things. I like my sex rough, and I climax hardest when my clit is getting licked while I'm fingered hard and fast.

"If someone wants to ask me out, the best way to go about it is to get to know me first. We should do something sweet on our date, like maybe a picnic or a movie. I especially like drive-in theaters. As the groom got into bed next to his young bride, he whispered, "Will I be the first to do this to you?"

She giggled, then said, "What a silly question. I don't even know what position we're going to fuck in yet."

Cole and Mimi were invited to a masquerade party. But at the last minute Mimi had a terrible headache and told her husband to go alone. Off he went, and she took some aspirin and dozed for an hour.

Awakening free of pain, Mimi decided to go to the party. Cole didn't know what she'd be wearing, giving her an opportunity to see what he did when she wasn't with him. Mimi spotted hubby cavorting around the dance floor with several attractive women, copping a little feel here and there.

Mimi sidled up to him and, being a seductive babe, let her dance partner go as far as he wanted with his hands. Then he whispered a proposition in her ear, and they dashed off to an empty room and had a quickie.

Just before midnight, when the revelers had to unmask, Mimi slipped away, drove home and put her costume away. She was reading when Cole ambled into the bedroom. "How was the party?" Mimi asked.

"Same old, same old," Cole muttered. "I never have a good time when you're not there."

"Did you dance with anyone?"

"I didn't dance at all," her husband replied. "After I arrived, I ran into Pete and Bill, and we ended up playing poker all night. But youre not gonna believe what happened to the guy I lent my mask and costume to."

When asked by his father if he knew about the birds and the bees, the young boy exploded: "Look, Pop, I found out there was no Santa Claus at six, no Easter Bunny at seven and no Tooth Fairy at eight. If you're going to tell me that grown-ups don't fuck, I've had it!"

Question: Why do redneck couples prefer doggy-style?

Answer: They both can watch wrestling while having sex.

Fiona and Mark were a married couple who lived on the 40th floor of a condo. One afternoon Fiona was having sex with her lover, a hunk named Jason, when she heard her hubby arriving home early. Fiona told Jason to stand still and not move a muscle.

"What's this?" Mark asked after noticing the naked dude in their bedroom.

"It's the robot I bought to have sex with when you aren't here," Fiona fibbed.

"Well, since you're already naked," Mark bellowed, "let's have sex right now!"

"I'm sorry, sweetheart," Fiona murmured. "My period just started. Let me get you a glass of wine."

After his wife left, Mark thought, I'm so horny, I'm gonna fuck that robot. As he stepped behind him, Jason announced in a robotic monotone, "System error. Wrong hole. Please step away."

"Damn robot!" Mark shouted. "You're a worthless piece of shit! I'm gonna throw you out the window!"

Remembering he was on the 40th floor, Jason stuck with the robotic act: "Software updated. Please try again."

A lesbian went to a gynecologist for a downstairs checkup. He looked inside and exclaimed, "Ma'am, your vagina is one of the cleanest I've ever seen during all my years as a gynecologist."

"And it should be!" the lesbian asserted. "I have a woman come in three times a week."

DIARY OF A SEX WORKER

The cyber dominatrix. The performer. The service provider. And the courtesan. Each specializes in their own iteration of sexual ecstasy. Each occupies a unique space within the adult entertainment industry. They each have a story to tell, and who better to tell it than the sex workers themselves?

HUSTLER asked four merchants of joy to keep a diary for seven days, chronicling their sexy adventures and all the itty-bitty moments in between. The results are humanizing, illuminating and hotter than Georgia asphalt in July. We cannot thank them enough for their time, honesty and effort.

SONIA VON SACHER, SERVICE PROVIDER

Twitter: @SoniavonSacher_; SoniavonSacher.com; OF: @SoniavonSacher

Beautiful, enchanting and booked months in advance, Sonia von Sacher is the sort of service provider who leaves you wanting more. And more. AND MORE. Based in Montreal, this kind and compassionate soul is a consummate professional with the client list to prove it. From exotic getaways to her work with the disabled, Sonia is living her best life on her own terms.

Monday

I'm back from a weekend in the mountains with a client and a sexy colleague. The limo drops me off right at my door. My hair is still full of baby oil from last night's wrestling match in an inflatable pool we bought for the occasion. It was so sexy and hilarious! Also, I still can't believe this gentleman fulfilled my dream of flying in a helicopter. Another thing crossed off my bucket list thanks to a lovely client.

With this beautiful getaway, I officially reached my income goal for the year. I'm feeling very proud of myself, especially considering how my American clients have been stuck on the other side of the border since COVID started. I'm taking my assistant out for a drink tonight to celebrate—but no champagne! We finished a dozen bottles last weekend, and I can't take any more. At the bar a group of women recognize me from a popular podcast I guested on last month. I love it when that happens; I'm always up for selfies with fans.

Tuesday

I wake up early because I have a client later this afternoon who requires hours of preparation. I like a man who knows what he wants, but all these outfits and accessories remind me of why my rates are so high. I then pack my bags and leave for an important booking three hours outside of the city. I never drive that long for a client, but this one is special.

When I get there, his mom welcomes me, and we have a little chat before she hands me a towel for the shower and leaves the house. She's hired me for her adult son, who is heavily handicapped. These are my favorite missions; it's not a lot of money, but seeing him smile and look so happy is my reward. I always cry a little when I leave him. I'm very sensitive to my disabled clients' and their reality. I do a lot of discounted work for this type of clientele these days.

Wednesday

I wake up extremely sore. My body aches. I'm wondering if it's the oily head-scissoring from two days ago or the impressive stunts I pulled off to have sex in such a bulky wheelchair yesterday. Either way, my massage therapist is coming! I see her once a week, since self-care is so important in this profession. Tonight is my live show, and I have to start setting up—I have a very special surprise in store: a fuck machine. My fans love it!

Thursday

Yesterday's show was insane! As always, I gave more than I had to give. Sometimes I think I'm too much of a performer, but I guess that's why my fans follow me. I've never been so happy to have a day off; no eyelashes, no shaving, no quick meals on the kitchen counter, no waking up early—the dream! Just relaxing and editing dozens of videos, replying to a hundred DMs, having an hour-long phone meeting with my assistant and scheduling my Twitter posts for the month. Sigh...how was I so naive as to think that my workaholic self could take a day off.

Friday

Shooting content today. My hairdresser is scheduled for 8 a.m., and the production team arrives at noon. I look sexy and post on TikTok before things get rolling. No time to waste! The shoot is over by 7 p.m., and I am starving. It's affecting my brain to the point that I imagine the dildo in my mouth is a hot dog. After dinner I do a two-hour video chat session with a client. They can't all travel to Montreal, so we play virtually.

MISS BIJOUX, CYBER DOMINATRIX

Twitter: @MissBijouuu, @CatfishBijoux

She's a neon-drenched dream who beams straight into your psyche—and bank account—like a virus. Cyber dominatrix Miss Bijoux is a findomme for the digital age, who uses her downtime to make life (and finances) a little less precarious for her fellow sex workers. She's also quite handy with a sword—or rather, an épée—so watch it with the back talk.

Monday

I wake up, drive to get my coffee and come back home to get some chores done. I feed my birds, water my plants and tidy up a little. All the while, I am checking my phone for opportunities. I get a message from a client who wants me to log on to their computer and install one of several customized "viruses" I have available.

...and it's showtime.

We start a remote session using the client's preferred service. I can curate their experience based on specific interests—this one doesn't want the session to be too intense, so I start slowly. I download some of my programs onto his computer, including pop-ups that say "HACKED BY MISS BIJOUX" or some other silly thing that they can't get to stop on their own. These can be a series of scary but fake error messages, unlimited text boxes popping up and even a forced reboot. I stop when I hear him say, "Thank you." I leave my office and eat a quick lunch in the kitchen before returning to edit some new fetish videos I made.

Tuesday

I check my phone at 9 a.m. and respond to messages from clients who are up late. Because of time differences, I sometimes speak with overseas clients early in the morning. Today someone wants to play a "money game," which means he gives consent to owe me a large amount of cash. The challenge is that if he can withdraw consent in under five minutes, then he only pays me for my time. He consents to a debt of $5,000, and I keep him in suspense while the clock is ticking. He manages to withdraw with just 15 seconds before his time is up. He thanks me and pays me $50. I order groceries for delivery and end my day editing a brainwashing fantasy video, one of my favorite things to film.

Wednesday

This is often my day to film. I get into my hottest outfits, do my hair and makeup, set up the lights, check my camera angles and hit record. I get some nice selfies to post on multiple platforms. I usually try to take a nap in the afternoons, but today I can't seem to stay asleep. Tonight we ordered tacos.

Thursday

Admin work today. A lot of my spare time is spent on the computer, editing websites I made and programming some chat bots for my clients to talk to. One day I'll automate it all and relax on the beach somewhere, but for now I'll make do. I spend at least eight hours a day here, but I enjoy the repetition. I update my clip and member sites while editing selfies on my phone. I stagger my posts every few hours for maximum hits. >>

Saturday

I'm busiest when people aren't working. My socials are more active, while bookings are usually longer and more elaborate. For instance, tonight I am leaving for a 24-hour call at a fancy downtown hotel. He booked a table at my favorite restaurant, and I bought a very nice dress for the occasion. I can't wait to see his jaw hit the floor when he sees me. What he won't know, at least before dessert, is that I have a bullet vibrator inside me and he's had the remote—hidden in his jacket pocket, by moi. A few vibrations later we head back to his room for the role-play scenarios he requested: a nurse, a police officer, a schoolgirl—all the classics! I've done them hundreds of times, so my performance is on point.

Sunday

It's 5 p.m. when I leave the hotel with a dozen roses. I'm tired but happy to have spent so much time with someone who knows how to treat a lady. I lost my panties, again.

Sunday night is usually set aside for finances—I count my income and do a budget for the following week, but right now I have no time. I need to pack my bags again because I'm leaving for an East Coast road trip with one of my regulars. My flight to Florida is tomorrow afternoon, so I need to hurry. I'll rest when I'm dead.

Friday

Shopping for exotic plants this morning. I take my two birds out to play for a bit and let them fly around while I drink my coffee. This is strategic—I want it nice and quiet in the house in case I take some phone calls tonight. In the meantime, I have a fencing class this afternoon.

Back home I put on a hot outfit and post that I am looking for prey. Someone always seems to contact me when I say I'm ready for prey. A phone call ensues, along with five or six different clients messaging me for text chat. I juggle those along with taking some hot photos to use for evil later on next week...

Saturday

I spend most of the day out and about; I go to brunch with a friend. Then we go thrifting. I'm on call, but otherwise I try to prioritize free time on Saturdays. That's when I'm looking for trouble. I answer my "ignore" line, where a client calls in and I keep him on speakerphone while I go about my day. He thanks me and tips $25.

Weekends are the most intense. I have one client with a very unique fetish: He wants me to humiliate and shame him by emailing his insurance company to inform them that he has lied about his policy information. I open a new strawman email account to correspond with them. Oddly enough, they don't accept my complaint, as it must come directly from the policy holder. The client is disappointed, so I find a new way to make him feel degraded, telling him I'm going to escalate the event via the fraud department, BCCing him in the email. He seems satisfied with this and sends me $400, leaving him with no lunch money for next week. We both like it this way. The money is better off in my hands.

> "I'M IN A GOOD MOOD, BECAUSE I GET TO RUN MY ERRANDS WITH A PUSSY FULL OF CUM."

Sunday

Today I'm working on the sex worker-friendly payment platform I created. Occasionally a model needs password support or help with a client's payment, and I'm on call 24/7 to help them. It's one of the most rewarding parts of my job and also the most difficult because there are so few payment options for sex work. I invest a few hundred a month into this project so that models can have a safe conduit for payments. Hopefully I'll be able to expand soon.

I spend the remaining hours of my weekend trying to relax. Some days I wake up at 3 a.m. ready to work; other days all I get done is a handful of phone calls because I'm so fatigued. I have some health issues that make things difficult sometimes, and a lot of sex workers I know have disabilities. All in all, I'm grateful that this is my job. When Monday comes again, it'll be time to install a new virus on someone's computer.

SPENCER BRADLEY, PERFORMER

Twitter: @SpencerBradleyX; OF: @MissSpencerBradley

Caution: Star ascending! The incomprehensibly sexy Spencer Bradley is taking porn by storm. The "enthusiastic slut" and passionate performer has racked up an impressive number of scenes and even landed an AVN nomination for Hottest Newcomer 2021. She shares a snapshot of her busy life and why guys who have had "the snip" are privy to a very special treat…

Today is a busy day. After breakfast I reply to emails. Occasionally I step away from my laptop to do random chores around the apartment, but I can never concentrate on one task at a time. I head out to get some goodies from the gas station and innocently flirt with the clerk, like I always do. Later I have plans with another performer, who agreed to help me record a custom video for one of my fans. After, he confesses that he got a boner watching me, and I'm flattered because this man is lethally attractive. We've worked together twice, so I already know he's good in bed.

Once we wrap up, we walk down to my local bar. Being a regular, the bartender pours our drinks generously. A few libations later and we're back at my place, running a bath. Pressed together in the tub, our lips meet, and I feel like I'm melting into him. Things move to the bed, and—long story short—I got filled with not one but two loads. I only allow men with vasectomies to come inside me, so it's a rare occurrence for me to get creampied. I go to sleep feeling very satisfied.

Tuesday

I wake up, and there's still cum leaking out of me. While I'm smoking my morning bowl, my best friend calls. They're excited for me when I tell them about the hours of smoldering sex I had the night before. I'm in a good mood, because I get to run my errands with a pussy full of cum. First stop is to get my COVID booster shot, then off to get COVID-tested for tomorrow's VR shoot. At home I check the call sheet to make sure I pack everything I need.

Wednesday

Up at 6 a.m. For breakfast, hash browns with a side of pineapple and Tajin. My prep for today was minimal since makeup and hair is provided. I thoroughly enjoyed myself, especially the talent's large, uncircumcised cock. At the end of the scene I accidently sprayed myself in the eye with his cum while jerking him off to completion. By around 7:45 p.m. I'm home again and, after a moment of rest, remember that I still have to pack for my flight to L.A. in the morning. I stuff some lingerie, slutty outfits and heels into a suitcase. I don't feel tired enough to sleep, but I'll try. >>

Thursday
The talent I'm working with today is in the makeup chair while another scene is being filmed in the same room. The director smiles and waves at me without missing a beat. I quietly walk over to the gorgeous performer and give her a hug.

After hair and makeup, we both get into lingerie for photos. We get dressed to film dialogue, then do photos of the scene as it unfolds, with us in different positions. Finally, after all that, we get to play! The time flew by—35 minutes, give or take—which means the scene went really well. By 8:30 p.m. I'm back at the airport and feeling absolutely wiped.

Friday
I wake up on my couch at 6 a.m. and accidentally knock over my bong, snapping the neck in half—glue to the rescue. Thinking I have to teach pole classes at noon, I start getting ready before double-checking the schedule: I don't teach until 4:30 p.m. I decide to fill my time with chores.

Only one student today; Fridays aren't super busy. We practice floorwork for the first lesson and twerking for the next. I play on the pole a little bit before heading home to shower and write my to-do list for tomorrow.

Saturday
Didn't have much of an appetite when I woke up. Made a strawberry smoothie, then a piece of toast with peanut butter that took me over an hour to eat. Once I'm finally functional and dressed, I drive to CVS to fill my birth control. I spend the rest of the day doing admin work and editing some videos. I'm exhausted—no alarm tomorrow morning.

Sunday
It's 4:45 a.m. I head to the kitchen for some bong rips. Then I message fans before going back to bed. In retrospect, I wish I had just stayed up. I didn't feel as bright the second time waking up. By 3 p.m. I'm off to the nail salon; my hands and feet need to look perfect for a big shoot on Wednesday. This is an exciting opportunity for me—I need to make sure I'm prepared and looking my best.

NOVA SKY, COURTESAN

Twitter: @ThatNovaSky; Sheri's Ranch: @SherisBrothel; MV: NovaSkyXXX

Welcome to Playland, where Nova Sky is waiting to make all of your fantasies come true—for a price, of course. The puckish model and performer is also a courtesan at Sheri's Ranch, a luxury brothel in Nevada, where she provides services ranging from BDSM to GFE and everything in between. If you have the cash and good hygiene, Nova is sure to cure whatever ails you. Tip generously, ladies and gentlemen. [Names and other details have been changed to protect anonymity.]

Tuesday

My workweek starts out a lot like anyone else's: I wake up early, brew coffee, shower and enjoy some goodbye snuggles with my dog before heading out the door to begin my shift. One thing: My shift is an entire week long. I work at Sheri's Ranch, Nevada's largest luxury brothel, and I start my "tour" with a state-mandated visit from the doctor for a full-panel STI screening. After I see the doctor, I get my room unpacked and decorated, then run errands around Pahrump to grab any last-minute essentials before my clearance comes back and I'm ready to get down to business.

Wednesday

The office calls in the morning to let me know I'm cleared to work. My first appointment of the week is Todd. He's a very shy, very attractive guy with a somewhat nerdy vibe who wants a sensual BDSM and pegging session —one of my favorite experiences that I offer. He's only ever gotten to watch the kink on video, so this is a really exciting step for him. His excitement rubs off on me, and I have a bounce in my step after we part ways.

Later that evening I get a call to my room. A gentleman has seen my photos on the display—there are monitors in the bar—and would like to meet me in person. Mike, a very nice guy with remarkably bad tattoos, says he's here wanting to get back on the proverbial horse after almost three years of traveling too much for a relationship, followed by a global pandemic. In our negotiation he says he wants to have wild, uninhibited sex. I'm more than happy to oblige, but soon discover that what he really wants is to cuddle and talk about how the final season of GoT was such a disappointment. He leaves with a smile.

Thursday

I get up early so I have time to work out before my first appointment arrives at noon. It's on my calendar as a couple coming in for a threesome (very common here), and it is, to an extent. Alana is with her husband, who is here for moral support and solidarity while she explores her recently accepted bisexuality.

I have a few hours in between appointments, so after I've freshened up, I take a book out to one of the poolside gazebos for tea time.

My next appointment is Braeden. He wants a "girlfriend experience" (GFE), which in my language is a multi-hour session and much more intimate than my usual fare. We spend the rest of the evening in a bungalow, bouncing between playtime and enjoying the stars. At one point I bring my guitar out from my room and we play for each other. We say goodnight well past my bedtime, and he promises to come to see me again.

Friday

My first order of business today is a threesome with one of my favorite coworkers and a client who is new to both of us. After we have some excellent sex and a shared bubble bath, he's on his way with some new swagger.

I'm barely out of the shower when my phone rings again. Apparently Braeden has kept his promise far sooner than anticipated, and he's back again for round two of my GFE! Today feels like being with an old friend; we have jokes from the day before and get to skip the "getting to know you" phase.

Saturday

I start my day with an early morning walk-in: Chris, a bigger guy with a really warm smile who is painfully self-conscious about his body. We have a really sweet encounter, and after he leaves, I eat breakfast and shower in the bungalow before heading back to my room. Later I give tours to curious tourists but spend most of the day recharging my batteries.

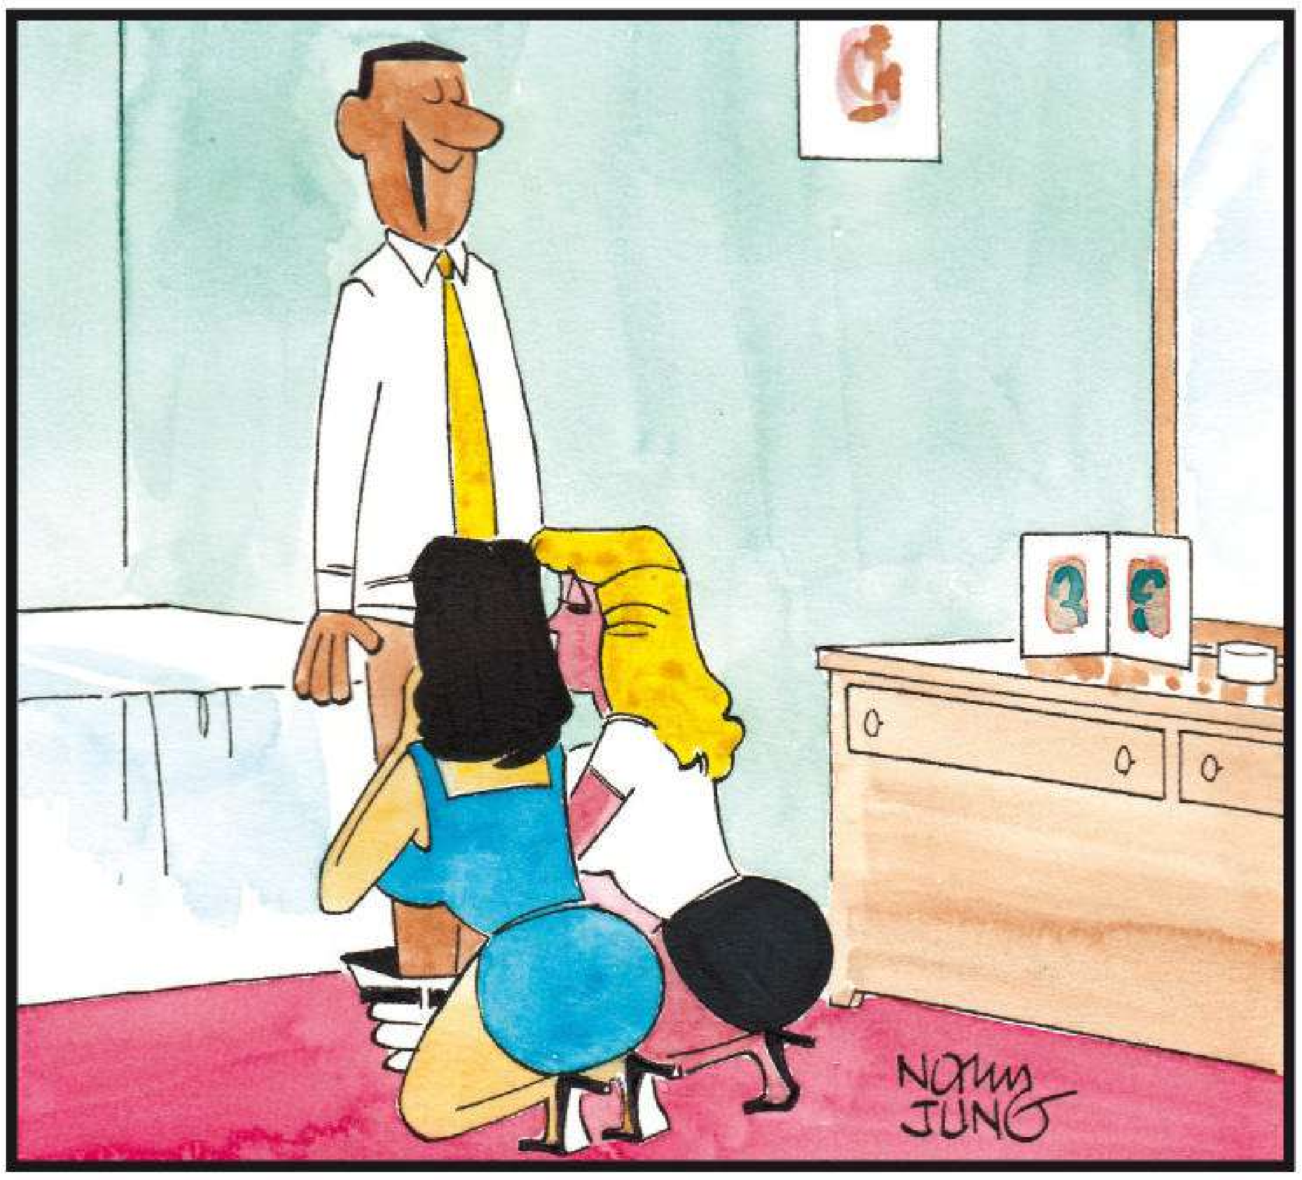
Sunday

Sundays tend to be quiet, but there must be something in the water because my phone wakes me up three times. My first caller is a bust, with expectations very high and budget very low. This happens again—a rare occurrence in such quick succession—then the third call is to remind me of an appointment I have with a semi-regular client I haven't seen since the shutdown.

We do our two hours in Playland, Sheri's take on an "adult" playground: a mega-bungalow with several role-play rooms, a sauna, hot tub and spa that you get all to yourself. It's been so long since we've caught up that when our time is up, he decides to extend the booking for another two hours.

Monday

I wake up excited, because it's packing day. I love my job, but I also love my dog, and at this point I'm eager to get home to her. I spend most of the day doing laundry and packing my room back up into the four storage bins we're allowed here. I'm a notorious over-packer, and my decor alone takes up an entire bin. I do a checkout with the office, and I'm off on adventures for the next few weeks until I'm back and ready to do it all over again.



I've always said, two heads are better than one!"

ASIAN BOSS

HUSTLER VIDEO. DIRECTOR: SID KNOX. STARRING: CINDY STARFALL, NYOMI STAR, LUCKY STAR, MARICA HASE, LOGAN PIERCE, TOMMY GUNN, DERRICK PIERCE & DANNY MOUNTAIN.

With Asian Boss, it's often the underlings who get to do the fucking. And yes, there's some pretty awesome fucking to be had. Tawny-skinned sexpot Cindy Starfall plays an ultra-bitchy employer in need of a good, deep dicking before she flips out and creates an ultra-toxic corporate culture. Luckily, a new employee shows up to set Starfall's yin straight and remind her, to paraphrase Marie Kondo, what sparks joy for her. After an awkward initial interaction involving a bit of cultural appropriation, the new hire's prick is cracking open Starfall's fleshy fuck box like a crowbar prying open a safe. The ensuing rut is refreshingly free of political correctness—this is all about reaching genitals-first across the cultural divide to bridge the gap with copious amounts of bodily fluid. To that end, the young apprentice splatters Starfall's tongue with a healthy dollop of nut nectar. Elsewhere, Nyomi Star is driven home by her trusty chauffeur Tommy Gunn. Fed up with the gender inequality in her workplace, Star is ready to quit her job, until Gunn puts Star back on the right path with a soul-invigorating fuck—what a difference a lay makes! Petite Japanese beauty Marica Hase turns in a jarring performance, stabbing her lover with a miniature samurai sword Kill Bill-style after the pop shot. Asian Boss will leave viewers likewise wielding the skin sabers between their legs. BEHIND THE GATES OF ONYX RIDGE ESTATES VOL. 2

EROTICAX. DIRECTOR: JAMES AVALON. STARRING: EMILY WILLIS, SILVIA SAIGE, EVA ALVAREZ, AIDEN ASHLEY, SOFI RYAN, LACY LENNON, SETH GAMBLE, CHARLES DERA & NATHAN BRONSON.

You probably don't need a refresher on the first installment of Behind the Gates of Onyx Ridge Estates to appreciate Volume 2. However, in case you want a recap: There's a super-exclusive enclave where young, hot and wealthy couples live, fuck and fuck around on each other, while an anonymous blogger reports on their shenanigans in her tawdry "neighborhood watch" newsletter. With its dish-heavy voice-over courtesy of the nameless muckraker (dubbed Betty Behind the Gates), elegant settings and explicit sex, this comes off as a cross between Gossip Girl, Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous and Caligula. If you have a lady friend who's partial to Days of Our Lives and you're hoping to introduce her to porn, this might be the gateway drug you're looking for. It's so soapy, you can taste the suds, but the path to XXX pleasure is well-greased with steamy sex sessions. It seems Betty Behind the Gates has caused quite the stir among the residents of Onyx Ridge Estates, leading to finger-pointing paranoia among the morally compromised denizens. Which leads to some gratifying scenarios. Willowy brunette Emily Willis has her troubled mind eased by her beau Seth Gamble, whose cock makes her worries disappear like a magician's wand as he jabs it down her throat. Someday we will rightfully eat the rich. In the meantime we will have to be content with watching them eat each other—and to that end, Behind the Gates of Onyx Ridge Estates Vol. 2 serves up a fairly tasty treat as we wait for the revolution to come. —P.D.R.

JULES JORDAN'S FLESH HUNTER 15

JULES JORDAN VIDEO. DIRECTOR: JULES JORDAN. STARRING: ANGELA WHITE, ALINA LOPEZ, VINA SKY, GIANNA DIOR, JULES JORDAN, STEVE HOLMES & CHRIS DIAMOND.

Oil up your scum guns and polish your pith helmets: Jules Jordan's Flesh Hunter 15 is here to take you on a sex safari, where pink prey waits in the bush to be conquered and devoured. This offering serves up game any sportsman would be happy to mount in his library…or his bedroom…or anywhere, really. Mammoth-mammed Aussie sexpot Angela White kicks things off with her glorious God-given tits. Apropos of the animalistic theme of the video, White is collared and chained and led around on all fours by swordsman/director Jules Jordan before he drives his skin spear into the depths of this delectable beast. Tempting morsel Alina Lopez, a writhing, gleaming-eyed seductress with a booty that begs for a carnal plundering, is hunted by a scrawny but well-endowed predator with the body of a brine shrimp and the cock of a Cialis-addled Clydesdale. Next the video's sexual expedition takes us to Miami Beach, where fawn-like beauty Vina Sky—who has a body tighter than a joint rolled at a discount dispensary—takes a thorough dicking like a trouper, despite being barely bigger than a sock puppet. By keeping his eyes on the prize pies, Jules Jordan's Flesh Hunter 15 hits its target. —P.D.R.

I didn't start messing around with women until I was in college. I checked out girls in high school, but I was too afraid to act on it then. In college, I finally felt free to explore my sexuality. And oh, my God! Now I have threesomes all the time. I just like to have fun and fuck. I either do all-girl threesomes or me with a girl and a guy. I prefer older men. Once I even had a secret relationship with my friend's dad." —Kenzie

I had a great childhood—awesome parents and a lot of friends. I admit it, once I lost my virginity, I was a straight up nympho! I banged probably 70 guys before doing porn and a few women, like maybe five or six. My body count with ladies would have been higher if girls weren't so hard to get with. To me, they're not as approachable as men, but I do so love them. Girls are hot!" —Cadence

DANA WOLF

"After I got into the adult industry, being in HUSTLER became one of my goals," says Dana Wolf, 23, a former porn A-lister residing in Las Vegas, Nevada. "So thank you for giving me this opportunity to do something I really love, getting naked for a very large audience." As you can see, the 5-foot-9 eye-catcher—who grew up as a self-professed "loner reading books and watching anime in a small Wisconsin town"—is fit as a fiddle. "I played volleyball and powderpuff football in high school," Dana recalls, "and now I'm into skateboarding, running, yoga and working out. I love going to the gym in a slutty outfit and making all the guys get boners." Asked to expound on that remark, Dana responds, "My motto is the dirtier, the better. Cocksucking is my obsession. I love draining a guy's balls and eating his cum. I did a lot of girl-on-top scenes in videos, but in my personal life I love spooning because the dick hits my G spot perfectly." —Photos by Tampa Steve

“My fantasy is to be gangbanged by five hard dicks.”

ELENA LUX

"I feel so free when I'm nude," admits Elena Lux, 24, from Budapest, Hungary. "I suppose I could have been a fashion model, being so tall and limber," the 5-foot-10 skin-mag newbie muses, "but I like men looking at me, even lusting for me. And the men I fall for don't read fashion magazines. I like rugged, working-class Adonises." Skateboarding fans are sure to dig learning that Elena was once a sponsored skater. "It's so exhilarating once you get the hang of it," she marvels. "A few years ago I made a YouTube video called 'I Am Living the Dream.' I'm wearing clothes, but making it was a lot of fun. Now that I've been in HUSTLER, I'm considering doing a porn video or two, just to see what it would be like. I love sex, especially in public, getting pounded doggy-style." Elena's occupation is a grueling calorie-burner. "I take tourists all over Budapest in a rickshaw," she explains, "a bicycle with a cushioned seat over the back wheel. There are various itineraries, such as the city's landmarks and romantic dining spots, but my favorite is the strip club tour. My passengers are usually men. I'm tempted to strip for a group some night and be a pedaling Lady Godiva."

"I've often skateboarded in Budapest's Vörösmarty Square. My fantasy is to be fucked there when it's swarming with people."

BRIELLE CAMILLI

"I love my body, and I've been getting more and more confident when it comes to showing it off," proclaims Brielle Camilli, 31, a "funny, laid-back" dental hygienist from Revere, Massachusetts. "I was apprehensive about posing totally nude for the first time," the 5-foot-7 hunting and traveling buff continues, "but I remembered lovers saying they could just look at my pussy and feel satisfied." Brielle—whose alter ego is the Italian Model because she was born in Catania, Sicily—prefers being more than bedroom eye candy. "I'm a bisexual passion pursuer," she tells us. "I love pleasing men and the ladies. I'm into giving blowjobs and doing my best to deep-throat the guy. My favorite position is doggy-style, and I love role-play, spanking, choking and anal. Sex isn't good unless it's intense and all-consuming." For music, Brielle digs Queen and Metallica, but "Sex Room" by Ludacris gets the nod when she's in the throes of passion. "I hope your readers get off while looking at my pictures," Brielle reflects. "I think i did pretty well cutting my teeth as a nude model, but I must admit that I burst out laughing when the photographer said, 'Open wide' and I wasn't at work. My dream job is being a stand-up comic." —Photos by Paradigm Foto Studio

CASHMERE & BRUTUS

TOGETHER AT LAST

HUSTLER CLASSIC
JANUARY 2003

PHOTOGRAPHY BY MATT KLATT

They first noticed each other at the condo pool two days ago, and ever since Brutus has spent all of his time there, hoping to catch sight of Cashmere again, hoping to hook up. He'd just moved in, but one look at her lovely curves, and he was done. It was lust at first sight, and the feeling was so mutual. The sizable bulge in his swim trunks did not go unnoticed. So when they ran into each other again at the homeowner's association meeting, they skipped out and ran back to the hot tub. They had an hour to dick and lick and dick some more, and they didn't waste a single fucking minute.

REV YOUR ENGINES

HUSTLER interviews four all-out car enthusiasts—Skylar Vox, Kaitlyn Katsaros, Chantel Toile and Kailana Kai. These gorgeous performers are not mere eye candy—they're fluent in performance, engine size, modifications…some of them even race! Powerful text and superhot photos compiled by Missy Martinez.

THE DEATH OF DEMOCRACY?

Longtime activist Harvey Wasserman believes that Donald Trump and Steve Bannon are kicking down the door to an American dictatorship in 2024. He details their plan toward that end and provides us with specific actions we can take to resist this power struggle and save democracy.

MY SISTER'S BOYFRIEND

It's hard being the youngest in the family. But finally hand-me-downs these barely legal beauties don't mind! Jane Rogers, Asia Rivera, Haley Spades, Angelina Lati steal their siblings' boyfriends and discover that they fit perfectly. Photography courtesy HUSTLER Video.
